1 - Acknowledgements

This project started in 2009 as a simple visual sheet (model and name only) with a few pages to identify common gas mask models for BDSM users, and subsequently by request, for collector groups. Later the requests and number of models grew more and more models and variants appeared and then in 2012 I decided to renew the project with more information and new images, making it an illustrated dictionary for gas masks.

All images in this project are property of their respective owners. I do not own them.

1.1 - Coverage

In this project I do cover:

- Gas Masks (APR, SCBA, PAPR, SAR)
- BDSM Gas Masks
- SCUBA Full Face Masks
- SCUBA Helmets and Heavy Duty Masks
- Rebreathers (CCR, CCUBA)
- NBC Suits (with integrated gas mask)
- Gas Masks for Animals
- Escape Hoods
- Full Face Air Force Pilot Respirators
- Full Face Airplane Oxygen Mask

In this project I don't cover:

- Semi Facial Respirators
- Dust Masks
- Oxygen Masks (Medical, airplane)
- Cirurgical Masks
- Semi Facial Air Force Pilot Respirators
- SCUBA (Octopus, Regulators and Half Masks)
- NBC Suits without integrated Gas Masks
- Welding Masks

- Cyber Gothic Gas Masks
- Steampunk Gas Masks
- Gas Mask Sculptures, Arts and Non-Commercial Concepts

Basically this project doesn't cover half masks, just full faces.

The BDSM Gas Masks still in this project because they were one of the first motives to make this project, so even after this is not the case, I decided to maintain it. And they also offer protection, so it is not all out of focus. See chapter 3 for more information.

The Steampunk and Cyber Gothic Gas Masks, although are full faces and use real gas masks, I decided to not include because none of them are functional, so it does not serve for protection.

1.2 – Data Gathering

Keep in mind that this work is subject for errors and imprecise data. All data was gathered mainly from collectors and product websites. But the information is not 100% guaranteed.

I do not guarantee any accuracy of these data. If there's any error, I'll fix in the next release.

1.3 - Classification

The methodologies used in this work are:

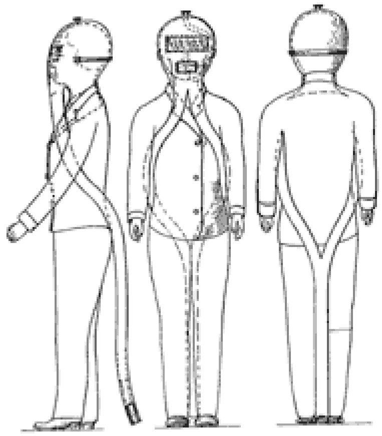

- Names prefixes with “the”, “model” and “type” were suppressed.
- Except for rare cases, all the models names were adopted without “-” (eg. M-40 to M40).
- Masks with the same model and name, but from different countries were kept replicated.

2 – A Bit of History

2.1 – The Gas Mask

The following information was taken from Wikipedia.

According to Popular Mechanics, "The common sponge was used in ancient Greece as a gas mask..." An early type of rudimentary gas mask was invented in the 9th century by the Banu Musa brothers in Baghdad, Iraq. They described it in their Book of Ingenious Devices, mainly for protecting workers in polluted wells.

Primitive respirator examples were used by miners and introduced by Alexander von Humboldt already in 1799, when he worked as a mining engineer in Prussia; long before that there was a Plague doctor's bird beak shaped mask/face piece filled with herbs.

The forerunner to the modern gas mask was invented in 1847 by Lewis Haslett, a device that contained elements that allowed breathing through a nose and mouthpiece, inhalation of air through a bulb-shaped filter, and a vent to exhale air back into the atmosphere. According to First Facts, it states that the "gas mask resembling the modern type was patented by Lewis Phectic Haslett of Louisville, Kentucky who received a patent on June 12, 1849." U.S. patent #6,529 issued to Haslett, described the first "Inhaler or Lung Protector" that filtered dust from the air.

Early versions were constructed by the Scottish chemist John Stenhouse in 1854 and the physicist John Tyndall in the 1870s.

Another early design was the "Safety Hood and Smoke Protector" invented by Garrett Morgan in 1912, and patented in 1914. It was a simple device consisting of a cotton hood with two hoses which hung down to the floor, allowing the wearer to breathe the safer air found there. In addition, moist sponges were inserted at the end of the hoses in order to better filter the air.

The first use of poison gas on the Western Front was on 22 April 1915, by the Germans at Ypres, against Canadian and French colonial troops. The initial response was to equip troops with cotton mouth pads for protection. Soon afterwards the British added a long cloth which was used to tie chemical-soaked mouth pads into place, and which was called the Black Veil Respirator. Dr. Cluny MacPherson of Royal Newfoundland Regiment brought the idea of a mask made of chemical absorbing fabric and which fitted over the entire head to England, and this was developed into the British Hypo Helmet of June 1915. This primitive type of mask went through several stages of development before being superseded in 1916 by the canister gas mask of 1916. This had a mask connected to a tin can containing the absorbent materials by a hose.

The British Royal Society of Chemistry claims that British scientist Edward Harrison developed the first practical gas mask for mass production, a claim supported by a thank-you note written by Winston Churchill.

American chemist and inventor James Bert Garner is credited by American sources with the invention of the gas mask in April 1915. Reading a newspaper article describing a gas attack on British forces which he hypothesized had employed chlorine gas, Garner remembered experiments he had performed while teaching at the University of Chicago, thus he set about creating the first gas mask which he tested on two of his associates in a gas filled chamber. Following the successful completion of the test, he provided the results to the British government. Garner's mask was of the first to be used on the Western front during World War I. Also in World War I, since dogs were frequently used on the front lines, a special type of gas mask was developed that dogs were trained to wear. In addition gas mask were developed during World War One and after for horses in the various mounted units that operated near the front lines.

The modern gas mask that people in the USA are familiar with today was developed in 1944 by the US Army Chemical Warfare Service. It was made of plastic and rubber-like material that greatly reduced the weight and bulk compared to World War One gasmasks and fitted the user's face more snugly and comfortably. The main improvement was replacing the separate filter canister connected with a hose by a filter canister screwed on the side of the gas mask, that could be replaced easily. Also, it had replaceable plastic lenses, much helping vision.

Gas masks development since has mirrored the development of chemical agents in warfare, filling the need to protect against ever more deadly threats, biological weapons, and radioactive dust in the nuclear era. However, where agents that cause harm through contact or penetration of the skin occurs, such as blister agent or nerve agent, a gas mask alone is not sufficient protection, and full protective clothing must be worn in addition, to protect from contact with the atmosphere. For reasons of civil defense and personal protection, individuals often buy gas masks believing that they protect against the harmful effects of an attack with nuclear, biological, or chemical (NBC) agents; which is only partially true, as gas masks protect only against respiratory absorption. Whilst most military gas masks are designed to be capable of protection against all NBC agents, they can have filter canisters proof against those agents (heavier) or only against riot control agents and smoke (lighter, and often used for training purposes); likewise there are lightweight masks solely for use in riot control agents and not for NBC situations.

Although thorough training and the availability of gas masks and other protective equipment can render the casualty-causing effects of an attack by chemical agents nullified, troops who are forced to operate in full protective gear are less efficient in completing their given tasks, tire easily, and may be affected psychologically by the threat of attack by these weapons. During the Cold War era, it was seen as inevitable that there would be a constant NBC threat on the battlefield, and thus troops needed protection in which they could remain fully functional; thus protective gear, and especially gas masks have evolved to incorporate innovations in terms of increasing user-comfort, and in compatibility with other equipment (from drinking devices to artificial respiration tubes, to communications systems etc.). The gas mask has thus now arrived at a 'fourth generation' of development.

2.2 – SCUBA Mask

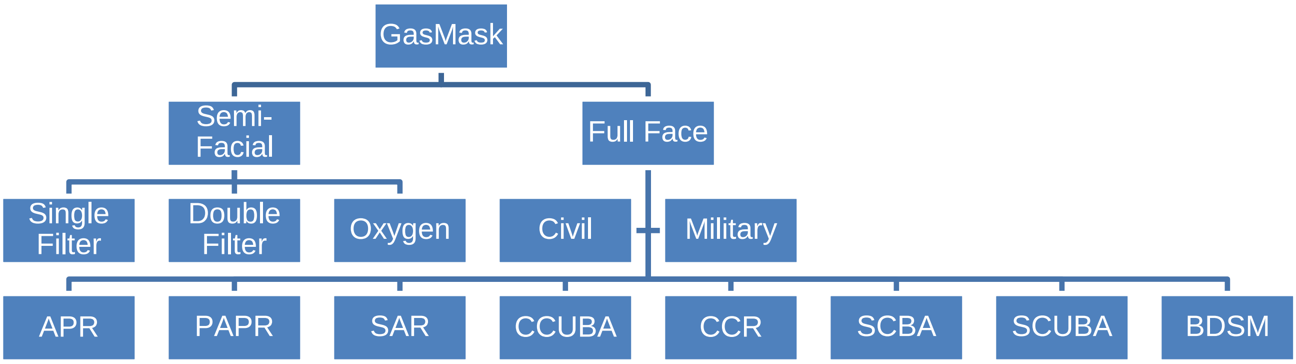

The first underwater apparatus appeared in 1823 by John and Charles Deane Brothers based on a previous invented gas mask, the Smoke Helmet. This was a firemen mask used against smoke. It has a hose where the fresh air was pumped inside the helmet. This mask was then modified for diving.

The modern diving system (SCUBA) was invented on 1943 by Emile Gagnam and Jacques Costeau and it was known as Aqualung. It consisted in a compressed air in a cylinder and a regulator would send the air to the diver. This is also known as open system because the air in the cylinder goes to the diver and then to the environment.

3 – GasMask Types

In a rough sketch, below is the classification of the gas masks:

The way a gas mask works is almost the same in all of them: there's at least one an intake and outtake of the air.

3.1 - Semi-Facial Mask

As the name states, is covers only part of the face (nose and mouth), and can be in three ways: single filter, double filter and oxygen mask (mostly used on hospitals). The semi facial mask is generally used for "light" filtering.

In this work it will only portrayed full face masks. Oxygen and half face masks is not supported.

3.2 - Full-Face Masks

In this class this kind of mask protects the nose, mouth and eyes. It can be classified as: PAPR, SCUBA, CCUBA, CCR, SAR, SCBA, APR and BDSM.

3.2.1 - PAPR (Powered Air Purifying Respirators)

It is a gas mask with a battery powered filter which maintains a constant positive airflow in the mask. The positive pressure avoids the entrance of chemicals in case of mask leak.

3.2.2 - SCBA (Self Contained Breathing Apparatus)

Also know as “Fireman gas mask”, is a gas mask which contains a cylinder with compressed air to breathe, so it can be used on contaminated or no air environment. It also can have a positive pressure to prevent leak. Generally it’s used gas masks with panoramic lenses.

3.2.3 - SAR (Supplied Air Respirator)

Almost identical to SCBA, except there’s no air cylinder, but a long hose connected in an air compressor that pumps fresh air to the mask. It also have positive pressure to avoid leaks.

SARs sometimes are called “Air-Line Respirator”.

3.2.4 - SCUBA (Self Contained Underwater Breathing Apparatus)

Also known as diving gear is used on underwater environment. In this work, only full face SCUBA masks will be covered.

The full face SCUBA masks allows the user to breathe by the nose, enabling to speak and also avoiding jaw fatigue. It's also used to protect the diver's face from cold or noxious substances in the water.

3.2.5 – BDSM (Bondage Discipline Domination Submission Sadism Masochism)

This is not a official classification. These masks are used for many activities on BDSM (see chapter 4 for more information). Generally these masks are normal APR masks with or without modification. There's also special production made functional masks only for BDSM use.

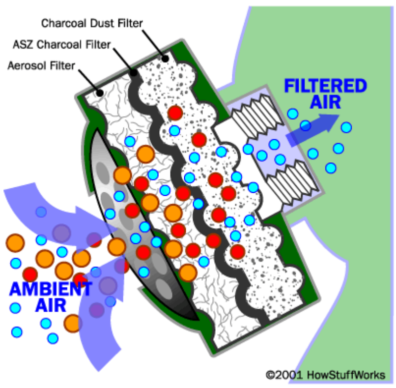

3.2.6 - APR

The most common type of gas mask. They are relatively simple and abundant in the market. They also are can be the base for all other masks (PAPR, SCUBA, CCUBA, CCR, SAR, SCBA, APR and BDSM).

The intake is installed a filter which is specifically for the noxious element in the environment. The air enters the filter, which contain chemicals that filters the air. The masks uses the air in the environment (there's must be at least 20% of oxygen in the air), and also has a negative pressure (in a case of leak, the noxious fumes will enter the mask).

3.2.7 – CCR (Close Circuit Rebreather)

CCR's are closed circuits (doesn't use or release gases in and from the environment) that uses a chemical reaction to generate oxygen to breathe. Generally is used on places that the air is too contaminated or have no air.

3.2.8 – CCUBA (Close Circuit Underwater Breathing Apparatus)

Has the exactly system from CCR except that it is designed to be used underwater.

4 - Why BDSM?

Gas masks are used in BDSM for a long time and for a number of reasons. The main reason is fetish. Some people may say that this fetish occurred because of the tough times on the person childhood between war times, because there were a large incidence of gas mask fetish on people from England, Germany and other WWII countries. But none of these information was confirmed, because there still fetishists that was born from post-war. The reason still a mystery.

So, why exactly the people from BDSM uses these masks for?

Here's some of the motives pointed out by BDSMers:

- Mystery
- Isolation, protection
- Breathing sound
- Have something "glued" to the face
- Play Accessory (e.g. Breathplay)
- Objectification
- Fetish
- As a submission form
- Anonymous Identity

5 – Maintenance

Now one of the most important part: Maintenance.

Modern gas masks are made from rubber, plastic or silicone. Although they are made for severe conditions, specially the rubber can dry up, and crack if kept stored for a long time or being in direct sunlight, etc...

The maintenance suggested by collectors is to apply a small quantity of Silicon oil (A.K.A Shiny) in the rubbery part of the mask, just a small amount to create a thin film of oil. You can also use that special oil for clean and polish rubber suits. Also pay attention to parts that have tension, such as straps. The sweat and oil from our hands can also damage the mask.

The mask must always be kept away from the sun in a dry place nad should be kept in the original bag.
